A Bill Introduced by Senator Hairston Yesterday.

FULL TEXT OF THE MEASURE.

Specially Designed to Prevent the Carrying of Railroad Cases Before Federal Courts.

The legislators down at Raleigh are beginning to bait their hooks for big fish. Senator Hairston introduced a bill, the design of which is to prevent the carrying of railroad cases before the Federal courts. The senate passed the bill to repeal the election law. The 50 ct. Corset bill providing for the removal of the inscriptions on the corner stone of the institution for the blind, including the name of Jim Young, passed the house by a very large majority. The colored representative from Craven voted for the bill. The house also passed a bill to repeal the act which provides for letting the public printng contract by the council of state. This covers the most important business transacted.

Senator Pritchard stated yesterday afternoon that nothing further had been done in the case of Judge Ewart. The judge is still in Washington, and as stated will probably remain in the city for a few days, at least until the committee dispose of his nomination. It is hoped by the friends of Judge Ewart that the judiciary committee will dispose of the matter very soon. The committee, it is believed, holds a meeting Monday morning, and it is thought possible by Senator Pritchard that the case may be reported at that time. The opposition on the part of Senator Butler and other North Carolina politicians to confirmation is very bitter, but the outlook is still favorable to Judge Ewart.

As was announced would be the case some time ago, Senator Butler has formally announced that he has abandoned his bill to grant pensions to ex-Confederate soldiers. The Senator took this course in view of the great opposition among the ex-Confeder ates themselves. As the bill has not been reported from the committee on pensions, it is likely it will be hung

MR. DINGLEY DEAD.

He Passed Away at 10:30 O'clock Last Night.

Washington, Jan. 13.-Hon. Nelson Dingley, of Maine, leader of the republican side on the floor of the house of representatives, and representing the second congressional district of Maine in that body, died here tonight at 10:30 o'clock, of heart failure, resulting from extreme weakness, due to double pneumonia. He was unconscious most of the day and death came quietly without consciousness being regained.

There were present at the time of his death, Mrs. Dingley, Miss Edith Dingley, Messrs. E. N. and A. H Dingley, sons of the deceased; Mr. James C. Hooe, an intimate friend of the family; Dr. Deale, one of the physicians who has been attending him throughout his illness, and two nurses. To within a few hours before his death, the family firmly believed, as they have throughout his illness, that Mr. Dingley would recover. During the past two days great hopes had been entertained for him. Late last night and again this morning Mr. Dingley had a bad sinking spell, from which he slightly rallied. There were further evidences of heart failure as the day progressed and the strongest stimulants were administered but without effect. He failed perceptably during the afternoon and as night came hope was abandoned. Mrs. Dingley is very much prostrated by her husband's death and is now under the care of a physician. There were many genuine and heartfelt expressions of sympathy when it became known that the Maine congressman was dead. All during his It always gives prompt relief. Many stories are told of McDonal Clarke, known 50 years ago in New York as the "Mad Poet," which show that he had a vein of great shrewdness, such as is often possessed by people who are counted insane. One day he was seated at a table in a New York hotel quietly eating his simple dinner when two young men took their seats at the same table. They were not gentlemen in the best sense of the word, and it occurred to them that they might have some sport with the poor poet. Consequently one of them said in an unnecessarily clear tone:

"I have seen almost everything and everybody in New York except McDonald Clarke. I have a great admiration for his poems, and I would give a great deal to see the man."

When he paused, the mad poet leaned forward and said with evident gratifica-

"Sir, I am McDonald Clarke, whon you say you wish to see."

The young man stared at him with much rudeness for a moment, and then, drawing a quarter from his pocket, he laid it on the poet's plate, saying, "That's for the sight!" Clarke looked at the coin for an instant, and then, placing it in his pocket, he took out a "York shilling," 121/2 cents. This he handed to the young man, saying gravely, "Children half price. "-Youth's Companion.

A Decidedly Novel Claim. A claim once made on the explorer, Cameron, in the neighborhood of Gaboon, Africa, shows the peculiar workings of the native African's mind. Some of Cameron's possessions proved unduly attractive to a native, and he determined on transferring the ownership to himself. He accordingly paid another native $200 to procure for him the coveted goods.

The assistant took the money and did his best to earn it, but Mr. Cameron had perversely locked up the very arti-cles that the ferrow's employer had set his heart upon. The man could not carry out his bargain, and neither did he feel that he could part with the money. Therefore he ran off with it. What more logical than that the man who was the loser by $200 should expect the explorer to make the loss good? This he assuredly did expect.

He went to Mr. Cameron and told him the story, demanding in the first place the $200 which he, Cameron, by looking up his goods, had compelled the complainant to lose, and, secondly, the actual price of the goods themselves, which, but for these arbitrary measures, would now have been in his possession It is not stated that his expectations were realized. - Watchman.

Sterne's Destitution.

Laurence Sterne, the writer, was the victim of the intensest poverty. A little time before his death, being in a state of destitution, he went one evening to borrow £5 from his friend Garrick. Upon arriving, he heard music and knew that a party was going on. He heard the merry laughter, and, gently replacing the uplifted knocker, retraced his steps. We never feel our miseries so keenly as when contrasted with the joys of others, and it is only then that we re alize Wordsworth's picture:

And homeless near a thousand homes I stood And near a thousand tables pined for food. Another story of this writer does not evoke so much sympathy. It was known that Sterne used his wife very ill. and in talking with Garrick one day in fine sentimental style of conjugal love and fidelity he said, "The husband who behaves unkindly to his wife deserves to have his house burn down over his

"If you think so," said Garrick quietly, "I hope yours is well insured."

A Malay Sultan's Letter.

In the cover there were three inclo-sures—a formal letter of extreme politeness, written by a scribe; secondly, a letter written in my friend's own hand and thirdly, another paper, headed, 'Hidden Secrets.' written also in the sultan's own hand. At the top of the first page of the second letter is writ-"Our friendship is sealed in the inmost recesses of my heart." Then this, "I send this letter to my honored and renowned friend" (here follow my name, designation and some conventional compliments). The letter then continues: "You, my dear friend, are never out of my thoughts, and they are always wishing you well. I hear that you are coming to see me, and for that reason my heart is exceedingly glad, as though the moon had fallen into my lap or I had been given a cluster of flowers grown in the garden called Benjerana Sri, wide opening under the influence of the sun's warm rays."-'Unaddressed Letters," by Swetten-

Unhappy Hindoo Women.

The Hindoo holy books forbid a woman to see dancing, hear music, wear jewels, blacken her eyebrows, eat dainty food, sit at a window or view herself in a mirror during the absence of her husband and allow him to divorce her if she has no sons, injures his property, colds him, quarrels with another woman or presumes to eat before he has finished his meal.

A Newcastle (England) man wrote this to the editor on a postal card: "What ho, Mr. Editor, what price this? If the mouth is the window of the intellect, toothache must be a sort of window pain."

Mow Doctors Differ

"For, ten solid years," said a New Orleans troker, "I lived in perpetual apprehension of sudden death. A doctor in Texas told me—confound his picture—that I had valvular heart disease, and if I wanted to stay on earth I must avoid every species of excitement. I did my best to follow his advice, but that miserable specter was at my elbow day and night and embittered my whole existence. I don't believe I sm a owexistence. I don't believe I am a coward, but the thought preyed on me un-til I began to fear for my sanity.

"At last, after all these years of infinite precaution, I went to a first class specialist to find out how much longer I'd last and was assured that I hadn't one single symptom of the malady. Talk about removing a mountain from a man! That assurance knocked off an entire range. It changed the color of the universe in a twinkling, and I was so happy I wanted to just throw up my hat and vell.

"That was a couple of years ago, and I have enjoyed myself tiptop ever since up to one day last week, when I happened to be chatting with the specialist and remarked that I'd like to murder that sawbones in Texas. 'I don't blame you,' he said. 'That man had no right to tell you that you had heart disease.
If I had found you right at death's door, I certainly would never have let you know it.' Now, by Jove, I don't know who or what to believe and am drifting back to the old state of uncertainty. wish I lived in a cannibal island and had never heard of doctors."-New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Milk and Mathematics.

When Thomas drove up to deliver the usual quart of white mixture, the gentleman of the house kindly inquired, "Thomas, how many quarts of milk do you deliver daily to your customers?"

"Ninety-one, sir." "And how many cows have you?"

"Nine, sir." The gentleman made some remarks about an early winter and the state of the roads, and then asked, "Thomas, how much milk per day do your cows

"Ah, um!" said the gentleman, as he moved off. Thomas looked after him, scratched his head, and all at once grew pale as he pulled out a short pencil and began to figure on the wagon cover: "Nine cows is nine, and I set down seven quarts under the cows and multiply. That's 68 quarts of milk. I told him I sold 91 quarts per day. Sixty-three from 91 leaves 28 and none to carry. Now, where do I get the rest of the milk? I'll be hanged if I haven't given myself away to one of my best customers by leaving a big cavity in these figures to be filled with water!"-London

Italy In London.

Many Londoners have visited the Italian district, which lies in the neigh-borhood of Theobald's road and Hatton Garden, and some with inquiring minds have strolled up Leather lane and watched the Italian ice cream venders and fortune telling women with pretty love birds, intermingled with the dirty, noisy, street hawkers, common to all London slums. It is amazing to learn how these Italians crowd together in the poky little houses of the courts and alleys. Generally a house is hired by an old padrone, who sublets to as many of squeeze in. The cellars are utilized as sleeping apartments, and in the morning as many as 20, even 80, men will emerge from the bowels of the earth, blinking and winking in the daylight after a night spent in the cellars under one small dwelling house. A whole family, consisting of a husband and wife and eight or nine fanciulli of vari ous ages, often sleep in one small garret or cellar. - Ludgate Magazine.

A Crusher.

Legge, bishop of Oxford, who had not youth as his excuse for his vanity, asked his friend Canning to come and hear his first episcopal sermon. They dined together afterward, and from the politician's silence the other ought to have known better than to push him, but being rather nettled he exclaimed, "Canning, you have said nothing to me about my sermon." "Well, it was short." "Oh," said the bishop, "it is better to be short than tedious." "But," replied Canning, "you were that too."

Athletic Missionaries. Two English home missionary workers were recently introduced by the Rev. A. J. Robinson to a Birmingham audience in these words:

"You Birmingham chaps have a lot of athletics, and quite right too. The two missionaries are both old athletes, you will be interested to learn. One. an old chum of mine, was in the Cambridge eight, and the other was famous among his fellows as a jumper. He could jump as high as his head."-Liverpool Mercury.
